Remembering Innocent Victims of Alcohol and Drug - related Crashes

Remembrance...

of innocent victims of alcohol and drug-related crashes.

Consolation...

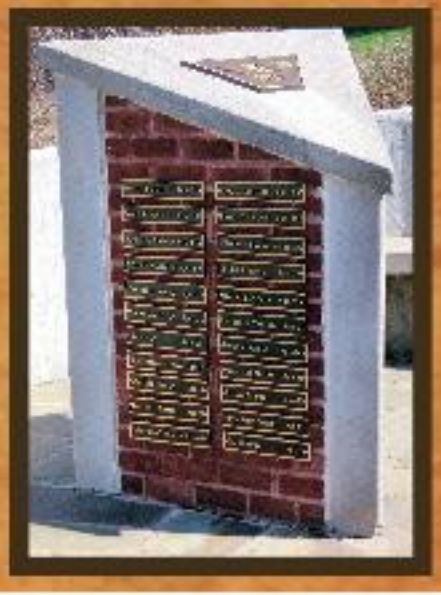
Hope...

that this monument will impact others to choose NOT to drink and drive.

This monument not only serves as a memorial to those who needlessly lost their lives in alcohol or drug related crashes, it also serves as a reminder of the tragic consequences which can result. It is hoped that this monument will serve as a prevention mechanism to those who view it and are impacted by it.



The Kain Memorial was initially made possible by the collaborative efforts of the York County SADD (Students Against Drunk Driving.) They helped design the monument and the surrounding garden. The monument was dedicated on May 8, 1987 containing 48 names representing victims who died in alcohol-related crashes in York County since 1980. Names continue to be added, in spite of well publicized awareness efforts to educate drivers of the tragic consequences which can result from driving under the influence. The last dedication occurred in 2003, when the total number of names had grown to 64.

"In memory of the innocent victims of alcohol-related accidents in York County since 1980" is inscribed on the plaque on the top of the structure. The monument is located at Lake Redman in Jacobus in Southern York County.

An endowment fund has been established in order for this monument and the surrounding grounds to receive continual care, so that it can continue to forward its tragic message to York Countians and others.

Your contribution will help to maintain the grounds around the monument. It will also ensure that funds will be available to add new plaques to the monument.
