

DISCLAIMER

This website contains information from a variety of sources. These sources are identified throughout the site. This information is not intended as legal advice. This site should be viewed strictly as one of several means of gathering information regarding the divorce process.

We believe that the information on this website is accurate and we will use our best efforts to update it as needed, but we make no guarantees. The Rules of Civil Procedure, Official Forms, and links to other sites change from time to time, frequently without advance notice. We have posted unofficial copies of the York County Rules of Civil Procedure and Rules of Civility for your convenience. Official copies of the Divorce Code, Pennsylvania Rules of Civil Procedure, and York County Rules are available at the York County Law Resource Center on the fourth floor of the Judicial Center. Do not assume that the Rules, Forms, and Links posted on this website are accurate. If you find an inaccuracy on our site, please let us know about it and we will try to correct it promptly.

The Divorce Masters Office cannot give legal advice. The divorce process is complicated and every case is different. You should consult an attorney if:

- You have questions about your rights and responsibilities with respect to marriage, divorce, custody or support;
- You want to know how to get a divorce;
- You want to know how the laws and statutes apply to your case; or
- You don't know which forms to file or how to fill them out.

You should visit the Prothonotary's office if you want information about a specific case. The Prothonotary keeps all of the official records regarding each divorce case, and we can't tell you anything that isn't in the Prothonotary's public records. We don't have enough people on our staff to look these things up for you.